● U. S. PATTERNS

SK

Collectors interested in the unusual would do well to look into this fascinating series. Coins which are not coins yet often much more beautiful and with a more interesting background, than the actual coinage of the same year. These were proposed designs which were rejected; the trial pieces, struck from the regular dies but in different metals are also included in this series. We propose to offer a small group each month with representations from the various denominations. If you can't wait for next month's issue, send your want list for quotations. The references are to the numbers as listed by Adams-Woodin. A few original copies of this book are available at $10.00, reprints at $3.50 cloth, illustrated. See December 1951 issue for earlier listing.

Forecasts for '52

(Each year the MONTHLY publishes forecasts as expressed by various dealers. The Editor is appreciative of the co-operation of these dealers.)

DAN BROWN: Activity greater than ever, choice coins a very good investment, as prices are bound to go higher.

MALCOLM O. E. CHELL-FROST: Steady interest in type coins and Comm. half dollars. Increase in prices all along the line, more so on scarce items. Young people will show more interest in coin collecting.

C. F. CLARKE: Business excellent. Demand brisk; dealers having difficulty buying; many new collectors; turning to later series as the early series are difficult to obtain and prices are up. Most prices steady next few months.

L. S. FORRER (England): 1952 opens with a good deal of promise. The trend, already noticeable this year, of the disappearance of the collector considering coins only as an investment to be realized at the first suitable opportunity, has now made way for the genuine collector interested in the coins themselves, and although this latter is naturally averse to throwing his money away, he is far more inclined to pay good prices for first class coins. In my view the upward trend in all coins in E.F. condition or better, will continue.

CHARLIE FRENCH: With the constantly decreasing value of the dollar, I believe that coins on the whole will advance in value in 1952. Those that should advance the most will be the more speculative issues; namely, gold coins and commemoratives.

ROBERT FRIEDBERG: Everything in my opinion is going up, up, up.

EDWARDS GANS: Broadening of interest for ancient and foreign coins. Beginners will start with lower-priced items, advanced collectors will have great difficulties in obtaining choice material. Most European countries suffer from inflation and higher prices. This fact plus the reluctance of American collectors to dispose of their collections, will bring more activity and higher prices.

HENRY GRUNTHAL: Shortage of Foreign Coins caused steady advance in 1951. High price levels abroad prohibit most imports here and our trend is towards exporting. Collectors should secure coins when offered here, if prices are at all in line with rarity. 1952 will see a very active numismatic market.

H. F. HISKEN: Business seems to be a bit better so we hope that it is on indication of an upswing for the coming year. Coin and stamp business have not shown any effects of the inflation that is evident in nearly all other lines of business.

HOLLINBECK'S: The market at the present is very strong and rapidly rising. We predict sharp increases in value on the currency and better U.S. coins. Today's prices should appear cheap in a year or two from now.

J. V. McDERMOTT: I believe coins that were thought high-priced in 1951 will be higher in 1952. Why not?—Everything else is still going up.

E. A. PARKER: Good coins will continue to bring good prices. Common gold coins should move up. All dealers having trouble keeping stocks up. 1952 should be a banner year!

HERMANN PORCHER (Brazil): Great demand as well as great lack of material to sell.

SATURN STAMP CO.: Coins very scarce. Business to continue upwards.

NORMAN SHULTZ: Dealers' stacks low and demand high. With everything advancing cannot see how coins can lag behind as they are way low now in comparison with other items.

TATHAM STAMP & COIN CO.: With the government defense program accelerating and not reaching a peak until mid-summer, 1952, we anticipate a new inflationary spiral which will mean higher coin prices and a greater demand for more popular items.

PAUL TINCHANT (Belgium): Better coins seem to have reached their highest for same time to come although they will be rarer still, because supplies from important sales will not be as plentiful as those the two last years. Medium should keep their prices and commoner increase. Sales will be lower as money might be much scarcer.

L. S. WERNER: The numismatic field in general has improved considerably during the past six months. Prices have and will continue to advance in choice conditions, items which have become scarce and hard to obtain, such as U.S. Colonials, U.S. coins early dates, paper money, crowns of the world, Greek and Roman.

CONSENSUS: All signs indicate continued increase in prices. New collectors, small dealer inventories, lower purchasing power of dollar, foreign purchases here,—all in one direction—up. Slight pessimism abroad because of difficulty in obtaining material. It's not how high they can sell, but how much. That problem will soon face most U.S. dealers. Collectors are reluctant to sell.
